Albanese upset over Council's cut

By Seth Daniel

Saying he is disappointed with the Council's posture toward the Fire Department during last week's successful $100,000 budget cut to his department, Chief Len Albanese said the Council missed an opportunity to help bring the Department forward.

The Council, particularly Council President Damali Vidot, called for the cut and said the Fire Department overtime budget had requested an increase. She and others felt like that number – which in the past has been described as being abused – should be doing down.

Albanese said it wasn't

Public Library featured on Gateway Trail

Recognizing the integral role that public libraries play in their communities, Massachusetts Center for the Book (MCB) has added a Gateway City Library Trail to its live app, MassBook Trails.

Chelsea Public Library is celebrated on the trail for providing democratic access to reading and 21st century gateways to opportunity for their patrons through digital connectivity and programming that enhances life-long learning and cultural assimilation.

"This trail underscores the unique history, architecture, and attributes of each Gateway City library," explains Sharon Shaloo, Executive Director of Mass Center for the Book. "Some are 'Carnegie Libraries,' built through the generosity of philanthropist and industrialist Andrew Carnegie; others had humble beginnings as a shelf of books to loan at the local general store. But this trail also reflects the common mission of these public institutions that is as important today as it ever was: our public libraries are centerpieces of civic engagement and advancement and benefit from the local, state and federal support they receive to further their objectives."

Available on the web and as a free download, Mass Book Trails was launched in 2017 with two literary walking tours in Boston and two state-wide trails: Literary Museums of Massachusetts, and African American Writers Heritage Trail. Additional tours are being added as libraries have accepted MCB's invitation to develop their own local literary, cultural, and historic tours.

The Massachusetts Center for the Book, chartered as the Commonwealth Affiliate of the Center for the Book in the Library of Congress, is a public-private partnership charged with developing, supporting

FAMILY EXERCISES: Siblings Kevin and Sandra Valle graduated together on Sunday, June 10, during the Chelsea High graduation exercises in the gymnasium. They were two of 344 students in the Class of 2018 – the largest class to come out of Chelsea in decades.

A large and successful class graduates from CHS

By Seth Daniel

Some 344 students walked across the stage at Chelsea High School on Sunday, June 10, as part of commencement exercises – becoming one of the largest classes to graduate in decades.

The Class of 2018 followed an unusually large class in 2017 as well.

At Sunday's commencement, Supt. Mary Bourque said the class had distinguished itself by not only its overall numbers, but also its successes.

"All of you standing here are the living and breathing reason why we say our mission is to 'We Welcome and Educate,'" she said. "No matter when you entered the Chelsea Public Schools, we wrapped our arms around you and moved you along the road to graduation. Class of 2018, I want you to know that we are so very proud of you and your accomplishments."

Of the graduates, 64 percent are attending a two- or four-year college next year. Bourque listed off 79 colleges where students have been accepted, including Wellesley College, Williams College, Tufts University, UMass-Amherst, University of Maine, Hamilton College, Drexel University, Denison University, Bryn Mawr College, Boston University and Boston College – to name a few.

Scholarship awards from those schools totaled $4.4 million, the largest amount ever at Chelsea High.

The rest of the class plans include:

- 4% are entering a certificate program.
- 2% are entering a Trade School.
- 6% are taking a Gap Year.
- 2% are entering the Military.
- 20% are going directly into the work force.
- 2%, are still working on their plans.

The Class of 2018 was also special in that 180 of its students enrolled in the dual enrollment/early college program with Bunker Hill Community College.

"Together you earned 1,374 college credits equaling approximately 458 courses," she said. "You saved over $250,000 on tu-

Community Preservation Committee announced

Record Staff Report

The newly established Community Preservation Committee will lead Chelsea's use of funds provided by the Community Preservation Act (CPA).

Chelsea voters approved the adoption of the CPA in November 2016. It will provide hundreds of thousands of dollars each year to be used for the creation and acquisition of affordable housing, historic preservation, open space and recreation.

Nine members appointed to the Community Preservation Committee are: Bea Cravatta, Judith Dyer, Caroline Ellenbird, Jose Iraheta, Michelle Lopez, Yahya Noor, Ron Robinson, Juan Vega, and Tuck Willis. Five members, by statute, represent City boards and commissions. The remaining four members are appointed by the Chelsea City Manager with the following requirements for each of the seats: one seat requires expertise in open spaces, housing and/or historical preservation; one seat requires expertise in development, business, finance, and/or construction; and the two remaining seats will be for individuals with a history of community involvement.

Community Preservation

Committee (CPC) members serve a three-year term in a volunteer capacity, and must be residents of Chelsea. The CPC's primary responsibilities include: approving an administrative budget for the City's Community Preservation program; developing an annual Community Preservation Plan; reviewing project applications and making recommendations for funding approval. Further, CPC members are required to meet with regularity and engage with community groups throughout the City as needed.

The Committee is organized by John DePriest, AICP, Director, City of Chelsea Department of Planning and Development. An RFP has been prepared to hire a Professional Planning consultant services to develop the Community Preservation Plan. The Community Preservation Committee solicits and reviews proposals for use of the Community Preservation Act funds and makes recommendations on how funds should be used. The funding of any project requires a recommendation from the committee.

Gerrish Street gang member sentenced on racketeering and drug trafficking

Staff Report

An East Side Money Gang (ESSG) member was sentenced last week in federal court in Boston on racketeering and drug trafficking charges.

Henry Del Rio, a/k/a "Junior," a/k/a "JR," 21, of Chelsea, was sentenced by U.S. District Court Judge Richard G. Stearns to five years in prison and four years of supervised release. In February 2018, Del Rio pleaded guilty to one count of conspiracy to conduct enterprise affairs through a pattern of racketeering activity, commonly known as RICO, one count of conspiracy to distribute cocaine and cocaine base, one count of conspiracy to distribute heroin, and one count of possession of a firearm with an obliterated serial number.

Del Rio is a self-admitted member of the ESSG, a Chelsea-based street gang, which uses violence to further its criminal activities and enforce its internal rules. Specifically, ESSG uses violence to protect its members/associates, target rival gang members/associates and intimidate potential witnesses. The ESSG is also involved in drug trafficking, including cocaine, cocaine base (a/k/a crack) and heroin in Chelsea and surrounding communities.

Del Rio conspired with other gang members and associates to distribute heroin and other drugs in Chelsea. Additionally, Del Rio sold a confidential informant a .45 caliber semi-automatic handgun with an obliterated serial number and a 30-round, high-capacity magazine from Del Rio's residence on Gerrish Street in Chelsea. Del Rio is one of 53 defendants indicted in June 2016 on federal firearms and drug charges following an investigation into a network of street gangs that had created alliances to traffic weapons and drugs throughout Massachusetts and to generate violence against rival gang members. According to court documents, the defendants, who are leaders, members, and associates of the 18th Street Gang, East Side Money Gang and the Boylston Street Gang, were responsible for fueling a gun and drug pipeline across a number of cities and towns in eastern Massachusetts.

A GREAT DAY FOR ALL CITIZENS

Saturday's Boston Pride Parade, in which mayors from across the nation joined with Mayor Marty Walsh, in showing their support for the Rainbow Resistance, was a manifestation of the depth of support for the LGBTQ community throughout the United States.

This show of strength is needed more than ever because it is evident that the hard-earned and long-sought rights of the LGBTQ community are under attack in Washington, where President Donald Trump has committed himself to appointing judges who will do what they can to roll back the rights that only within the past few years have become accepted as part of our political and social landscapes.

The sad, but terrible reality is that just one vote -- one more Trump appointee -- on the U.S. Supreme Court could bring us back to the medieval days before the Stonewall riots that took place almost 50 years ago (just as could happen to Roe v. Wade, which also is almost 50 years old).

This is why it is important that local governments show their strong support for the LGBTQ community, because regardless of what happens in Washington, the day-to-day protection of rights for all Americans rests largely in our cities and towns. If all politics is local, so too is respect for every individual in our society.

As long as our mayors and local officials hold true to the essential principles on which this country was founded -- that all persons are created equal and entitled to the pursuit of life, liberty, and happiness -- the effects of what happens in Washington can be minimized and mitigated.

We congratulate Mayor Walsh for being willing to stand front and center on this issue. We trust that all Bostonians will join with members of our LGBTQ community in supporting the goals of the Rainbow Resistance each and every day.

GLENDA JACKSON -- A TRUE INSPIRATION

Glenda Jackson, the brilliant British actress, is 82 years old. Yet despite being an octogenarian, she won the Tony Award for Best Leading Actress in a play Sunday night.

Performing on the stage on Broadway is grueling work -- eight shows a week -- for anyone, let alone a person who is well beyond what usually is full retirement age (65 years old) for most of us.

We congratulate Ms. Jackson on this amazing achievement -- and we know we speak for all of us who are approaching the latter stages of our lives in thanking her for demonstrating that the older generation still is capable of achieving great things.

A TRAGEDY WITH A LESSON FOR ALL OF US

Most of us probably never heard of Charlotte Fox, who was the first American woman to ascend three, 26,000-foot or higher mountains, including Mt. Everest.

Yet she tragically made the news recently when she was found dead at her home in Telluride, Colorado, apparently from a fall while she was descending a steep flight of stairs inside the house.

Needless to say, the circumstances of the 61 year-old Ms. Fox's passing are tragic, but they also are highly-ironic.

Her tragedy bears a lesson for all of us, namely, that every person, even a world-class mountain climber, is susceptible to injury and even death from accidents in our home as we go about our everyday lives. Falls -- on stairs, from roofs, and tripping over something -- are responsible for more injuries to senior citizens than any other cause.

Our personal safety is our own responsibility. We need to take care in everything we do.

With God and Richard Pipes

By Dr. Paul Kengor

Editor's note: This article first appeared at The American Spectator.

The most respected academic authority on the Russian Revolution, 20th century communism, and the Cold War has died. He was Richard Pipes, longtime professor of Russian history at Harvard, and a remarkable man.

Where to start with an adequate tribute to Professor Pipes? I'll start with some biographical observations and then finish with personal reflections.

Richard Pipes was born in Poland on July 11, 1923. As a 16-year-old Jew at the time of Hitler's invasion, Pipes mercifully escaped, thanks to a clever and shrewd father. He credited not only his father but also Providential intervention. That experience, and those that followed, taught Pipes several life lessons. In his memoir, Vixi: Memoirs of a Non-Belonger, he wrote: "The main effect of the Holocaust on my psyche was to make me delight in every day of life that has been granted to me, for I was saved from certain death." Pipes observed: "I felt and feel to this day that I have been spared not to waste my life on self-indulgence or self-aggrandizement but to spread a moral message by showing, using examples from history, how evil ideas lead to evil consequences. Since scholars have written enough on the Holocaust, I thought it my mission to demonstrate this truth using the example of communism."

Pipes would do exactly that. Pipes earned a doctorate in history at Harvard in 1950. He spent the next 50-plus years there, as professor of Russian history, director of the Russian Research Center, and principal investigator of the Harvard Project on Cold War Studies. He was well-received at Harvard, with full classrooms, even as one of its few outspoken conservatives. In 1996, he retired, though his association with Harvard continued under emeritus status. Among his most important publications were Russia Under the Old Regime (1974), The Russian Revolution (1990), Russia Under the Bolshevik Regime (1994), The Unknown Lenin: From the Secret Archive (1996), and Communism: A History (2001). The latter is a concise go-to book for understanding communism in theory, practice, and history.

But among Pipes' greatest contributions were outside the classroom, as he helped win the Cold War at a practical-policy level. To that end, he joined President Ronald Reagan's National Security Council in 1981, where he was the NSC's senior Kremlinologist.

He did great work for Reagan, which means he was loathed by the Kremlin.

In January 1982, Pipes was described in Pravda as "one of the ideological mentors of the U.S. administration." The Moscow Domestic Service excoriated this "odious figure" who "plowed the furrow of ardent anti-sovietism and anti-communism." He was a "dyed-in-the-wool reactionary, hysterically fighting for nuclear confrontation with the Soviet Union." Pipes was a favorite bogeyman of the likes of the disgraceful disinformation artist Georgi Arbatov. He would confess satisfaction over arousing the contempt of such "vile people."

Pipes certainly had Ronald Reagan's respect, and vice versa.

New NFL rules won't silence fight for justice

By Ayanna Pressley

If the NFL thinks it can silence players who speak their conscience with a new anthem-protest policy, it should take a look back at history.

Americans just observed Memorial Day to commemorate those who have fought and died for our basic rights, including our First Amendment right to free speech and peaceful protest.

We must not let President Trump, Commissioner Goodell, or the NFL owners conflate this issue as being un-American or disrespectful to the flag and military. Players who take a knee during the national anthem do so to protest injustice across the country -- fulfilling a patriotic duty to never accept injustice, but to call it out when we see it.

"Don't get it confused," wrote former New England Patriot Chris Long on Twitter. "These owners don't love America more than the players demonstrating and taking real action to improve it."

He's right. The players are bringing to light issues like police brutality, systemic racism and economic inequality. Regardless of your opinion on these matters, the ability to peacefully protest is fundamentally American. That their willingness to do so makes some uncomfortable is entirely the point. We should be uncomfortable with the growing gaps in our society, and we cannot allow ourselves to become desensitized to these injustices.

As a candidate for Congress in Massachusetts' 7th District, I am giving voice to this issue because this district is deeply impacted by many of the same inequalities that caused these players to kneel.

Multiple studies, and a recent Boston Globe Spotlight series on race, have proven that our district is one of the most unequal in the country. Too many are being left behind.

In 2016, Colin Kaepernick sought to bring to light long-entrenched issues worthy of both attention and change. He has since been blacklisted by the NFL for his stance, but he has not been silenced. Instead, he has inspired countless others with his message.

Elected leaders must do more than just acknowledge that systemic racism, economic inequality, and the achievement gap exist. We must actively work to interrupt these patterns of discrimination. We must focus on effective legislative solutions to tackle disparities at their root, where they continue to choke at the promise of yet another generation.

These issues are part of my lived experience, and they're not mine alone. Too many of us know the heartache of being separated from our mothers, fathers, daughters or sons.

I know that we need real and informed leadership on criminal justice reform at the federal level, to end the school-to-prison pipeline that disproportionately impacts black and brown families.

We need bail reform and to eliminate mandatory minimums. We must ensure incarcerated individuals are accurately counted in the Census, and we must use restorative justice for successful family reunification and federally-funded and gender-informed reentry programming.

We need common-sense gun control, and must treat it as the public health crisis that it is. We need to go even further and demand federal support for communities experiencing trauma.

We need greater accountability, not less, for police officers. This means enacting reforms that ensure the police are here to protect and serve our residents and not forcefully arrest, profile or deport them.

I recently joined 200 leaders of color, millennials, and grassroots activists at the historic Museum of African American History in Boston to talk with them about these issues.

During that gathering, I brought up the words that Frederick Douglass spoke 150 years ago in that same room: "Here we are today, contending for what we thought we gained years ago."

Douglass was referring to freedom of speech in 19th century America, but his words could easily be applied to the nation we see before us today. That the reason we face these inequalities, is because we have the same leadership that has not made solving them a priority.

If Democrats take back Congress in 2018, it will be our responsibility to tackle the enormous challenges we face in earnest, but even if we remain in the minority, it is not an excuse to take our ball and go home.

This district still deserves and demands principled, vocal leadership that brings the fight to Washington, just like the players have brought their fight to the NFL.

sa. He was impressed at how Reagan had “grasped that the Soviet Union was in the throes of terminal illness” at a time when “nearly all the licensed physicians” — academic Sovietologists, the State Department, the CIA, journalists, ambassadors — “certified its robustness.” Pipes said that Reagan “instinctively understood, as all great statesmen do, what matters and what does not.” This quality, said Pipes, cannot be taught: “like perfect pitch, one is born with it.”

Pipes’ most lasting contribution to the Reagan team was his hand in writing one of the most critical documents in the take-down strategy against the USSR: NSDD-75. Released on January 17, 1983, it became probably the most important document in Cold War strategy under Reagan’s and Bill Clark’s NSC. As Pipes put it, the nine-page directive “said our goal was no longer to coexist with the Soviet Union but to change the Soviet system.” Norman Bailey would call NSDD-75 “The Strategic Plan That Won the Cold War.” Bailey’s NSC colleague, Tom Reed, called it “the blueprint for the endgame.”

The Soviets certainly saw it that way, as evidenced by an article in one Soviet publication in March 1983, which carried the telling title, “Pipes Threatens History.” It alleged (correctly) that NSDD-75 “speaks of changing the Soviet Union’s domestic policy. In other words, the powers that be in Washington are threatening the course of world history, neither more nor less.”

They were indeed. Warnings About Putin It was two decades after NSDD-75 that I met Pipes in person. It was September 27, 2005, and he came to Grove City College to give our annual J. Howard Pew Lecture. A few things from that day have stuck with me.

I’ve never forgotten Pipes’ assessment of Vladimir Putin, which has stood the test of time. I asked his opinion of Russia’s prospects for a democratic future. Pipes described what he called a “very discouraging picture.”

I had high hopes that after the dissolution of the communist regime, Russia would take the path of democracy — imperfect, but a democratic path nonetheless. Instead, they went right back to autocracy. I have no hopes now.... Russia 10 to 20 years from now will be a kind of a mild dictatorship. If Russians elect their leaders, they will likely do so in skewed elections....

Of course, Russia today is certainly better than it was under the communist regime.... But it is not a democracy. It’s not what we hoped for. It’s an autocracy. Not a tyranny. Not a totalitarian regime. An autocracy....

According to the Russian constitution, the president can only serve two terms, but there is already talk in the Duma that he should be begged to run for a third term, that it is undemocratic to deny the people the right to vote for a man they want just because he has served two terms. Putin repeatedly says that he will not run for a third term, but I would not bet on that.

I argued with Pipes about that. At the time, I had a much more positive view on Putin and Russia, and I was surprised by Pipes’ pessimism. As usual, he was right.

Pipes and Ted Kennedy Beyond that, two other things really struck me about that Pipes visit in September 2005.

I handed him two things that really piqued his interest: One was that March 1983 article from the Soviet press, “Pipes Threatens History,” which Pipes hadn’t seen. (I found it in Soviet press archives.) He loved it. It made him proud to so rattle the Kremlin.

The other document was unworthy of pride: it concerned Ted Kennedy’s private overture to the Kremlin.

I had been with Pipes all day, from the airport to dinner to the lecture and then getting him back to his room at Grove City College’s Cunningham House. Late that evening I showed Pipes the now-infamous May 1983 Ted Kennedy-KGB document of which I had recently come into possession. I was considering publishing it in my coming (2006) book on Ronald Reagan, but only if I could verify its authenticity. Given his expertise in Soviet archival work, Pipes was a perfect person to examine the document.

I handed Pipes the five-page memo in Russian, followed by an English translation. He sat in a chair in the corner, legs crossed, and began with the Russian version. I waited on the sofa, thumbing through a coffee-table book of Norman Rockwell illustrations. I impatiently headed to the entryway and then the kitchen in search of a piece of paper to jot down his conclusions.

Pipes calmly stared at the document and then muttered a curse word in reference to Kennedy. I immediately wrote down every word that followed. I’ve debated back and forth in writing this tribute whether I should quote Pipes verbatim. His reaction was visceral, and I implore readers to consider it in full:

After studying the document in silence, Pipes looked up at me and shared his immediate emotional reaction, “This is treason.” When I cautioned that it might indeed be close to treason but not necessarily, Pipes nodded, retreated, and reevaluated, speaking more carefully, “Yes, at least very close to treason.” He then provided a rough summary of what he read: “He [Kennedy] was operating behind the back of the president of the United States, reaching out directly to a major head of state, to work against the president.” He paused and added simply, in his typical style: “Terrible.”

I implore people to interpret this in the proper spirit: Pipes’ initial reaction was to curse Kennedy and utter the “T” word. It’s a natural first-reaction I’ve seen many times. But after his initial anger cooled, he stepped back, thought more deeply, and assessed that, yes, at the very least, what Kennedy did was bad. Treason? Maybe, maybe not. Pipes knew that treason was a significant legal, technical, Constitutional matter. He knew that far more information would be needed to level such a formal charge. But it was bad.

I told Pipes my understanding of the provenance of the document. Before I could ask my main question, he affirmed, in his distinctive voice: “I’m sure it’s authentic.” I pressed him (and many others, incidentally) on that, inquiring whether the memo might be a forgery. “Oh, no,” he said. “I have no doubt that this is authentic.”

I told him that I felt history needed to know about the document and what it describes. He completely agreed: “Yes, yes.... I hope you can publish it.”

I shared with him my concern that Kennedy and his liberal admirers in the media would tear into me for questioning their vaunted “Lion of the Senate.” Pipes advised me on that and wished me luck. It turned out I had nothing to worry about it. Kennedy and his press sycophants simply ignored the document, and still do to this day.

“Fools and Useful Idiots” I would remain in touch with Richard Pipes over the years. He was an invaluable expert and eyewitness. I could give example after example.

As I searched my email box today, the most recent Pipes’ email that I hadn’t deleted is dated April 7, 2014. I had asked him his thoughts on the role of the Soviets in the attempted assassination of Pope John Paul II. He wrote:

Thank you for your letter of April 3, which arrived while I was in Moscow. I certainly was not skeptical about Moscow’s role in the attempt on the life of John Paul II while working in the White House in 1981: I believed then and believe now that the assassination attempt was initiated and organized by the USSR....

I trust you are well. All the best, RP

Like Ronald Reagan, like Bill Clark, like Bill Casey at the CIA, Richard Pipes never had any hesitation in thinking Moscow capable of all sorts of malice and mischief.

Another of my favorites was an email thanking me for exposing what Pipes called “the fools and useful idiots” among the American left who said stunningly ignorant things glowing about Lenin’s and Stalin’s USSR. It reminds me of when I saw Pipes at a Philadelphia Society conference in April 2012. I was speaking on dupes from the 1920s and 1930s, quoting the likes of George Bernard Shaw and H. G. Wells and Margaret Sanger and their outlandish encomiums for Stalin’s Russia, as well as Malcolm Muggeridge’s bewildered amazement at the spectacle of Western progressives raving about Bolshevism. I lifted my eyes from my text and caught Pipes with an impish grin, loving every minute of the roast.

And then there was a correspondence we carried on over the prospect and possibility that Moscow considered a full-scale invasion of Poland in 1980-81, with President Reagan contemplating a military counter-response, which, as Pipes said dramatically, would have erupted into “World War III.”

Well, those discussions are gone now. In fact, each time I received an email from Dr. Pipes I wondered how much longer they would continue, because his email address included the year of his birth: 1923. Each year that date grew older.

It ended last week, at age 94. In God’s Image I’d like to finish with a favorite Pipes’ reflection, which I’ve shared every year with my Modern Civilization course at Grove City College. It deals with what matters most to Pipes now, at this very moment. It concerned keeping rather than losing the faith. Pipes wrote:

Many Jews — my father among them — lost their religious beliefs because of the Holocaust. Mine, if anything, were strengthened. The mass murder (including those that occurred simultaneously in the Soviet Union) demonstrated what happens when people renounce faith in God, deny that human beings were created in His image, and reduce them to soulless and therefore expendable material objects.

As noted, surviving the Holocaust made Pipes delight in every day that God had given him. There would be many such days. He felt a “duty” to defy Hitler by living a joyful and contented life. To be sad and morose and to complain would thereafter strike him as “forms of blasphemy” in light of his Providential gift of survival.

Above all, he would spend the remainder of his long and scholarly life exposing godless ideologies and the totalitarian tyrants who deny that human beings are made in God’s image. Few human beings in the academy did that as nobly and expertly as Richard Pipes.

The richly diverse Chelsea High School (CHS) Class of 2018 celebrated its commencement on June 10. Families welcomed the 343 graduates, whose caps were decorated with inspirational sayings, photographs, and flowers, into the gymnasium with blowing horns and cheers.

“Graduates, I hope you are sitting tall and proud. We have grown up together. Four years ago, I started with you as the new principal of Chelsea High School,” said Principal Priti Johari, who will be leaving Chelsea High for a position in the central office. “Graduating from Chelsea High School is no easy feat. We push you, we challenge you, and we demand the best versions of yourselves. These experiences have developed you into mature, energized, civic-minded voices.”

Principal Johari hopes that graduates shape the world to be a kinder place, and encouraged them to work hard at what they are passionate about. She advised her former students that finding purpose in the next steps of their lives will give them strength and lead them to success.

Graduates decorated their caps with inspirational sayings, photographs, and blinking lights.

CHELSEA HIGH SCHOOL 2018 GRADUATION

FAZILA NASIMI CLASS VALEDICTORIAN

Hello friends, family, teachers and everyone else.

I want to start off by saying something that I have learned throughout high school, which is to make sure you have someone there to cheer you on when you succeed, to pick you up when you fail and to push you beyond your limits. For me, this is my mother, a resilient and strong woman that supported me no matter what. As most of us are children of immigrant parents, I hope we all have made them proud on this day, to show that their hard work to get us here has paid off. I would like us to give a round of applause to appreciate our families for all the sacrifices they have made for us. My fellow classmates, as we embark on this new adventure that awaits us, whether that may be college, taking a gap year or working, I hope to impart some advice. As we go out into the scary unknown that is the real world, do not forget your roots and where you came from. As I'm sure we all know, when we tell people that we are from the City of Chelsea they automatically give us a look of disdain, as if to say, "oh you're from there". DO NOT let this deter you, add this to your fuel for your fire, so that you can work harder and be successful, so that we can change the perception others have of this city. We should ALWAYS be proud to say that we are from Chelsea, and then the people will look at us with envy, because of the fact that you are from a city with a vast multitude of vibrant cultures like none ever before. To the Class of 2018, I wish you ALL the best in the future and for us to be proud to say that, we are from the City of Chelsea.

THANK YOU!!!!

Class of 2018, family and friends... I have a hypothesis, and this hypothesis consists of three parts, which together can lead to self-actualization. The first part is believing in yourself, and in order to explain what I mean by this I have to use an example that is near and dear to many of our hearts, and that is the parents who came to this country as immigrants. My parents are from El Salvador and Guatemala, and they came to this country, as many of yours have, leaving everything behind, owning only the clothes on their backs and the determination in their being. They learned a completely new language, went from mowing lawns to the back breaking jobs of construction and housekeeping, and eventually placed their hopes and aspirations into a child like myself, like the majority of you in this graduating class. Now, this does not happen with a minimum amount of effort, and frankly it is not done without a person believing in themselves and investing this belief into something greater than them.

Which leads into my second part of this grand hypothesis: loving yourself first. This year I had the pleasure of being graced with words of wisdom from my teacher, Mr. Labranche. He did not know it at the time, but he was helping me get through some pretty confusing times. I wanted to share this here because after will always come from within you. You can feel love for another person, but in the end you cannot feel the love that they hold for you. So I guess, what I want to tell you guys is that the rarest yet most satisfying forms of love comes from within you, and the day that you start searching for it you start your journey beyond that 50 percent and happiness will follow.

To recap, part one is believe in yourself, part two is love yourself, and finally, we have come to the third part of my hypothesis to realizing your potential; blocking out the world when it seems as if all of it is against you. I dedicate this portion to the minorities: the LGBTQ+ community, the black community, the females, Los Hispanos, Muslims, and more. Every human being on this world consists of the same features that determine our categorization in the animal kingdom as homosapiens. Therefore, I believe that every human being on this Earth has the potential to create love and to spread love no matter their race, gender, sexual orientation or religion. Minorities experience a lot of hatred that stems from ignorance and evil. As horrible as this may be, it is important to remember in these tough situations, that you are not alone in your fight and support is always waiting to be given to you somewhere. Love is abundant on this Earth, and if you find yourself in lack of it, I promise you there is someone or something waiting to provide you with it. Open your hearts and your minds, and transform barriers into bridges.

As my words come to a close, I want to leave one more thing with all of you. To every person here today, I would personally like to say that you are amazing, you are one of a kind, and potential brews within you waiting to be tapped. You have a purpose whether you have realized it or not. So in all of your journeys to reaching this self-actualization that I have gone on and on about, I hope that you all are unapologetically true to yourself, phenomenally driven, greedy for your own love and creating harmony in the world.

Viva la raza!

RUCELLIE JIMENEZ. CLASS PRESIDENT

Good afternoon administrators, parents, and guests. My name is Rucellie Jimenez and I have had the pleasure to be the President of the Class of 2018 for 3 years. I am honored to be one of the first to welcome you to our graduation. Before I actually get into my speech I want share some thank yous. Thank you to Ms. McDonald and Ms. Matthews (also known as M&M) for making feel like a rock star whenever I didn't. Mr Goodstone, thank you for truly teaching me what it means to be a leader. I have to thank Mr. Peacock. I'm a little reluctant because he's a pisces but thank you for constantly believing in me and my fellow classmates. I couldn't mention all these teachers without mentioning the one who saved my junior year, Ms. Reyes. Thank you, big sis, for being my lighthouse when times were so foggy. My friends, I won't go through them all, they know they are, I want to say how much fuller my heart is with you by side. And last but not least my family, especially my mother, father, and brother. I know we butt heads more than what's probably allowed, but I wouldn't have been able to achieve what I have without your support.

Now I will direct my speech to the best class to grace this high school, no arguments allowed, Class of 2018.

Hi guys! I would like to start my address towards you with a "yur" but my mom's in the crowd and I don't think she'll be very pleased if I do so.

I'm not up here to tell you to work hard. You've already done that and I trust you will continue to do so. The only thing I ask of you is to take care of yourself.

I want to be 100% honest with you. Just a couple days ago I doubted everything about my future. I had an overnight trip to my university and never felt more discouraged in my life. I walked in knowing I was going to be the one of few colored kids in every space but no one explains to you how lonely that is. I felt lost and out of place there.

I am a person built of emotions. I'm like a little emotional sponge. I just soak up all the vibes and energy around me and that will likely determine my mood. So when everyone around me was happy and confident in each choice they made I felt the need to do the same. I was acting like I was on top of the world even though I was so nervous. Like my hands were sweating so much. In my many attempts to make friends I asked one person, "How are you". They replied with "eh, not so great I'm not really feeling the vibe here and that's making me nervous". I was shocked to hear his earnest emotions... I paused and realized we were in the same position and that made me a lot less lonely.

That small interaction made me feel so much better just because someone was honest with how they felt. Yet, more often than not I find myself hiding my feelings to convey an image of happiness.

All our lives it's been drilled in our brains that the constant end goal is happiness. You are not obligated to feel happy all the time. For most of my senior year, I was not happy most the time. Heck, for most of my high school career I wasn't happy. I would wake up every morning, stressed, terrified of the future, and once again stressed. But rather than confiding this to a person, a friend, a teacher, anyone, I thought it would be better to handle this on my own.

We all feel that we are forced to act happy even when you are not we're not. To internalize all out other emotions. That it's a your moral obligation. That we need to show others how happy we are in order to demonstrate how we are in control of our lives and that being sad is pitiful and that being mad is unstable. And that is truly a toxic mentality. You ARE HUMAN. You NEED to feel. You need to show others your feelings so they know it's okay to feel. If everyone in the world just showed how they felt, dropped their facades and just felt, no one would be afraid of their emotions.

I want to advise you to be one of the first. To stop repressing all those emotions and wear them on your sleeves. I know this might be harder for some of you. Realize the world is FILLED with humans for you to feel with. Turn to the person sitting next to you right now. Tell them how you TRULY are feeling. Are you nervous for post high school plans? Did you stay up all night worrying if you were going to trip on stage? Y'all just wanna hop on that plane to the Bahamas? Tell them. Go on, I'll wait.

Now don't you feel a little better?

Sharing your emotions is not a burden. Sharing your emotions is not going to make you weaker. Just feel freely.

I am proud of us Class of 2018. I know we will all go out in the world and do great things.

PRINCIPAL PRITI JOHARI CHS PRINCIPAL

Welcome 2018 graduates, parents and family members, Chelsea High School Faculty, Central Office Administration, and other members of the Chelsea Public Schools. I would also like to thank our esteemed School Committee and City Council members, as well as our many valued community partners for attending today. It takes all of us working together to create such a robust, diverse, and large graduating class.

It is my distinct honor to present to you Chelsea's graduating Class of 2018.

Graduates:

I hope you are sitting tall and proud in your graduation gowns this afternoon. Believe it or not, we have grown up together. Four years ago, I started with you as the new principal of Chelsea High School. And I think we both know from experience, a lot can happen in four years. Frankly, graduating from Chelsea High School is no easy feat. We push you, we challenge you, and we demand you to be the best possible versions of yourselves in class, on the field, and in the community. I am confident that the many research projects, problem sets, performance assessments, and Capstone projects you have completed have made you strong -- strong of mind, strong of character and strong of will. These projects, practices, matches, and volunteering experiences have developed you from lost freshmen asking how do I get a locker into mature, energized, civic-minded voices...you've gone from listening to leading. But our stories are much bigger than the last four years. There was life before high school and there is life after high school. An event like graduation highlights not only the rich diversity of the community from which we come but also our great promise.

We have had a week of celebrations: senior breakfast, senior prank, field day, and awards night. Yet, School Committee Yessenia Alfaro's words are still ringing in my ears. She said, quite simply: be somebody. You are entering the world during a turbulent time and, in spite of that, and because of that, we need you and your talents and your drive and your thoughts. And that is not only our wish for you, but our plea... be somebody who draws on their education, be somebody who exercises their voice, be somebody who uses their power to shape the world... shape the world to be a kinder and better place.

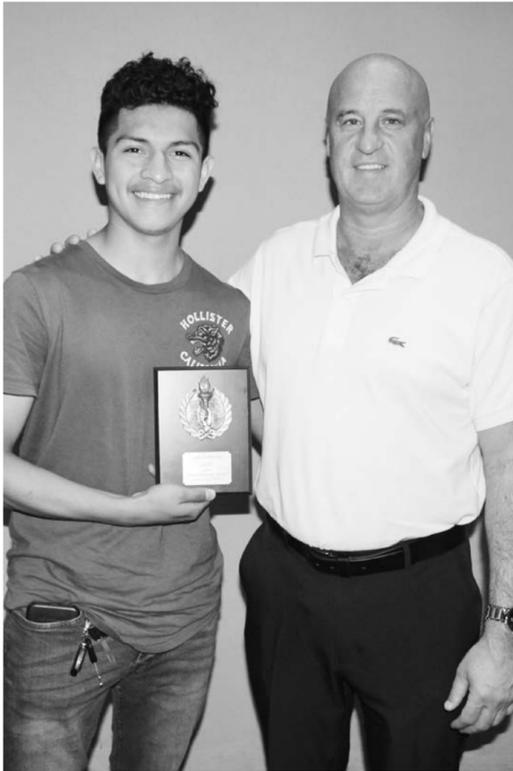

Chadwick Boseman, whom you might know as the actor who played Black Panther, recently gave some advice at a college graduation that really spoke to me and I wanted to share it with you: "When you are deciding on next steps, next jobs, next careers, further education, you should rather find purpose than a job or a career. Purpose crosses disciplines. Purpose is an essential element of you. It is the reason you are on the planet at this particular time in history." But what is purpose? Purpose is not just a goal, but the engine that drives us toward our goals. It gives us strength when everything feels hard... my dad's best advice to me as a confused freshmen in college was to do something

I was passionate about...if you are passionate about your work you will work hard, and work hard, and work hard... and then success will follow. Doubting yourself is an inevitable part of the journey, but purpose is what keeps you going in the face of doubt. This happens because your purpose is larger than you; it comes from the same place you come from—from the people who nurtured and taught and protected you... your purpose comes, too, from their pasts and their purposes. But purpose isn't like Black Panther's perfectly fitting vibranium suit. Your purpose can't protect you from everything; you have to renew and repair your purpose by reconnecting with your roots and reaching out to new people and new experiences; the state of our world has forced me to do this many times in recent years. And you have already been doing this here in Chelsea; your purpose, whether you already know it or are still finding it, comes, in part, from Chelsea, and from Chelsea High School. Chelsea is a unique place because people come here from so many different places, and they bring with them their own hopes, and histories, and sense of purpose. Chelsea has shaped, and will continue to shape, your purposes—as it has my own. But you can't simply take on a purpose or expectations from other people; if you do, it won't have the life or energy to move you past the obstacles that will inevitably lurch into your path—you have to make the purpose your own. As much as you inherit your purpose from your family and your community, you must also create and recreate it over and over again. Doing so will take work and tenacity, but it will give more than it takes—it will lend you voice, and focus, and strength. And our world needs that right now.

I wish you more than luck. Thank you.

fair, and he said he Council hasn't listened to his calls for an appropriate percentage of funding and more staffing.

"I'm disappointed with the cut that was made and the comments made by Council President Vidot," he said. "This year we made budget. I told the Council that if they properly funded the Fire Department we would do our best to live within that range, and we delivered. We require no supplemental funding to finish the year.

"I have advocated for more staffing since my first month on the job," he continued. "We have acquired both the staffing and apparatus to make that happen. Now, we need this additional staffing to translate into more boots on the ground daily. If the recent fire on John Street is not indication enough of that, I'm not sure what is. These major fires in our densely populated neighborhoods are a significant threat to our community. We need as much help as possible in the first 10 minutes of these fires to protect our neighborhoods."

He said the John Street fire was one where they lucked out because had other calls been going, the staffing might not have been there to respond correctly.

"We are lucky that all of our apparatus was available at the time of that alarm and not tied up on other calls," he said. "I assure you, the devastation would have been much worse. Twenty homeless could have been 100. We cannot count on luck. We need to be prepared with a reasonable amount of protection based on the threat that we face."

In 2016, Albanese presented to the Council that the Fire Department budget is around 6.25 percent of the overall budget, and national standard indicate it should be between 6.5-7 percent based on the call volumes.

This year, they would be 6.25 percent and that represents less percentage-wise than in 2016.

"Our overall budget represents only 6.25 percent of the overall City Budget which is actually less percentage wise than we received in 2016," he said. "Even when you consider that we will eventually take over the new hire salaries in full, we will still be between 6.5 and 6.75 percent of total budget, well within a reasonable and acceptable range."

For his overtime request, he said he requested a 4 percent increase to the current year's $1.25 million overtime budget. That, he said, is because salaries increased by 4 percent and so there would be less overtime coverage.

"It's one thing to hold the line, but to cut our entire request, plus an additional $50,000 that we had this year makes no sense," he said. "It's like saying thanks but no thanks."

City Manager Tom Ambrosino said he believes the chief can make things work despite the cut.

"I was opposed to that cut," he said. "I think the chief can make his overtime and salaries work. He has some open positions. There are three now... Hopefully he'll make it and if he can't, I'll have to come to the council in the spring and ask for more money."

Albanese said the cut won't stop them from carrying out their plan, but it does not one any favors.

"The $100,000 cut will not keep us from continuing on our plan to increase daily staffing, but it doesn't help," he said. "With the amount of information we have provided the council, I think those members who voted to support this cut missed an opportunity to show their commitment to protecting our neighborhoods. The $100,000 is literally one-half of 1 percent of the City Budget, but it can translate into having an extra firefighter searching for a trapped occupant. To me, that's money well spent."

Apollinaire in the Park to experiment with salt, landscape with 'Midsummer'

Record Staff Report

Known for its comedy, magic, and romance, Midsummer has a disturbing dark side too.

The play kicks off with an engagement forged in war, a father threatening death to his daughter, and an escape into the woods where the environment has been decimated by the force of a fairy feud.

"And through this distemper we see the seasons alter... and the mazed world. By their increase, now knows not which is which."

In these times of environmental destruction and climate change, it's striking to see these concerns front and center in Midsummer. Only by setting aside their pride and desire to dominate can the inhabitants of the world of Midsummer (fairies and mortals both) create harmony and rebuild the world they want to live in.

The play begins and ends in the court of Athens, with those scenes staged in the park's lush green waterfront "amphitheater," but as the lovers flee the unjust justice of the court, they enter into a world destroyed by wind and flood where only salt remains.

This now barren landscape is being created by artist Marc Poirier as an extension of the massive salt piles looming next to the harbor below the Tobin Bridge. Marc's company, Longleaf Lumber, has donated large timbers salvaged from the Hingham Naval Shipyard to construct a crib structure reflecting the marine architecture of Boston Harbor's piers and bridge abutments, which thanks to Eastern Salt will be filled with road salt to create this haunting world.

Marc Poirier began his career as a painter, and received his MFA in painting and sculpture from Columbia University School of the Arts. He went on to found Longleaf Lumber, a Cambridge based reclaimed and antique lumber mill, and has recently merged his passions to create large scale site specific sculpture. Most recently at Apollinaire he created the multi-level maze set for the production of Everyman, and the centerpiece bar in the new Black Box theater. At over 5' tall and 60' across, with Midsummer he is taking his work to a much grander scale.

Sound Designer/Composer David Reiffel will be creating the sonic world with a full size upright piano mounted on the salt. This is David's 18th show with Apollinaire. His work has also been heard coast to coast from the Oregon Shakespeare Festival to Boston's SpeakEasy Stage. He recently won the Norton award for Outstanding Musical Direction. Lighting Designer Christopher Bocchiaro will be lighting the two worlds of the play and designer Susan Painsio is creating the costumes.

One of Boston's great comedic actors will take on one of dramatic literature's great comedic roles.

Actor Brooks Reeves, who was widely recognized for his portrayal of Kulygin in this season's Three Sisters (receiving both Norton and Irne nominations), stars in the role of Bottom. Brooks's most recent Boston appearance was in dual roles in Love, Valor, Compassion, which DigBoston's Christopher Ehlers recognized as "one of the best performances of the year."

Audience members are encouraged to bring blankets and beach chairs, a picnic to enjoy along with the harbor views, and walking shoes for the 2 moves during the performance.

ition and fees and saved another $40,000 on books."

The average numbers of credits earned was eight, but Bourque said on student, Samir Zemmouri had earned 33 credits, the equivalent of a full year of college.

"Most impressive is that 69 students completed English 111 College Writing I course, a required course that often acts as a prerequisite for college coursework; and 15 students of the 69 entered our country and began their educational career at CHS as an English Language Learner," she stated.

There were also seven members entering the military, including: Pedro Barrientos, Krishell Chacon-Aldana, Adrian Diaz, Nelson Hernandez Jr., Denis Martinez Pineda, Carla Romero and Melinen Urizar Perez.

Bourque closed out her comments about the Class of 2018 on Sunday with five points of wisdom. More than any achievement, she advised to live a life of purpose.

"Choose to live a life of purpose," she said. "A life of giving back. Knowing our purpose in life empowers us, strengthens us, grounds us. It gives us the courage and conviction to fight the good fight and for the good reasons. A life of purpose is a successful life."

Avellaneda, Traffic Commission move to protect Silver Line Stations

By Seth Daniel

The City has moved to protect the resident parking around the new Silver Line Stations and busy 111 bus stops, anticipating a rush of commuters that will look to capitalize on easy parking in the day and a fast bus into Boston.

The Traffic Commission in late May approved the plan to enforce the existing resident parking program during the day hours of 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Typically, in most parts of Chelsea, the resident parking program is enforced at night from midnight to 5 a.m.

Some exceptions are near the Commuter Rail and near the Chelsea Court.

The City Council approved the plan last week, on June 4.

The idea came from Councilor Roy Avellaneda, who first began talking about it at Council in December.

He said this week that he was glad to see proactive action.

"We don't want to see commuters coming from Everett, Malden and Revere driving over to Chelsea and parking all day long so they can take the Silver Line into Boston and park for free," he said. "I'm glad they also decided to take the extra step of protecting the busier 111 bus routes too. This is a win for Chelsea residents."

After suggested by Avellaneda, Planner Alex Train worked up the proposal and sent it to the Traffic Commission.

City Manager Tom Ambrosino said they will begin enforcing the ordinance soon after they relay information to residents, as residents will need to have information in the areas affected. Most residents already have resident stickers, but they may need to be aware to get placards for their visitors during the day hours.

That's a major change from what is currently in effect.

Ambrosino said they plan to have a public meeting on June 21 to explain the program and give out information to those effected. He said he wants to make sure people have a chance to digest the information as there were no public meetings beyond the Traffic Commission.

The meeting will take place at Chelsea City Hall in the City Council Chambers at 6 p.m. on Thursday, June 21.

The areas effected for the Silver Line include:

- Gerrish Avenue from Broadway to Highland;
- Library Street, from Broadway to Highland;
- Highland Street, from Marlborough to Box District Station;
- Marlborough Street, from Broadway to Willow.

Those areas affected by the 111 bus stop protections are:

- Washington Avenue, Bloomingdale to Heard St.;
- Washington Avenue, Spruce to Jefferson;
- Franklin Avenue – all;
- County Road, from Washington to Basset;
- Forsyth Street, from Washington to Franklin;
- Gardner Street, from Washington to Parker Street.

City Manager says new residency ordinance unenforceable until 2021

By Seth Daniel

City Manager Tom Ambrosino said he would gladly enforce the new Police and Fire residency ordinance confirmed last week at Council, but not until at least 2021.

"It has to be negotiated through collective bargaining," he said. "The firefighters are under contract until 2021, and the police are now at the state Joint Labor Management Commission. It probably won't be able to be negotiated with either unit until 2021.

We have no plans to enforce it until there is a new contract because the law is clear this is a change in the contract subject to collective bargaining."

The Council voted for the matter last month, and staved off a challenge to that vote last week, led by Councilor Giovanni Recupero. Recupero has tried for seven years to get the residency plan in place for new police and fire hires. The plan now in effect would require all new hires as of July 31 to live in the city for five years after hire.

The matter, however, cannot be enforced until the City Manager re-negotiates the contracts with the police and fire, meaning that all member would get raises in exchange for that change in working conditions.

Ambrosino said the unions could decide not to agree to the matter, which would also make it unenforceable if it is outside any contract.

"An ordinance cannot supersede a mandatory collective bargaining matter," he said. "It is unenforceable until it shows up in a collective bargaining agreement."

POLICE Briefs BY SETH DANIEL

TAKING INITIATIVE

Police Chief Brian Kyes has enjoyed praising the actions of Officer Timmy Broman, who was noted for going the extra mile to help a man panhandling at on the Parkway and Webster Avenue this week.

Kyes said panhandling has been an ongoing problem at that corner, and police have had to move people along many times of late for public safety reasons, mostly.

This week, Broman encountered one of the regulars named Corey and decided to try to help him. Broman pulled up to him on the Parkway and asked if he wanted help finding a job. Though Kyes said he figured Corey would decline, on that day Broman was able to convince him to hop in the cruiser.

Together, they went to a day labor office in downtown Chelsea and Broman was able to convince the ownership to take Corey's job application. That they did, and Kyes said it was above and beyond.

"Hopefully Corey will follow up and it will bear fruit," said Kyes. "These are the kinds of things that come from our proactive policing with our HUB/COR format. I commend him for taking that extra step. We never know what might become of it."

THREATENED LANDLORD

On May 29, at 8:54 p.m., officers responded to Lambert Avenue for a report of a neighbor dispute. Upon the officer's arrival, several neighbors came forward saying that something had happened between the victim and her tenants who live next door to her and her family. The victim stated that the female tenant had approached her outside the residence and held a knife to her throat. The female suspect was arrested on scene.

Karen Riva-Clarke, 61, of 12 Lambert Ave., was charged with assault and battery with a dangerous weapon and intimidating a witness.

LEAVE THOSE HYDRANTS ALONE!

On May 29, at 10:35 p.m., a CPD officer responded to Orange Street for a disturbance. The officer observed an incoherent male yelling at the employees of a private company the City had hired to flush the fire hydrants as part of routine maintenance. The male began interfering with the men and threaten the officer. He was placed under arrest on scene.

Adan Galeas, 37, of 36 Orange St., was charged with disorderly conduct.

ERRATIC DRIVER = STOLEN CAR

On May 31, at 6:35 p.m., CPD detectives were on an investigation in the parking lot of Chelsea Commons. They observed a Honda Pilot driving erratically, and they ran the registration. They were notified the vehicle was reported stolen out of Boston. They activated their lights and attempted to pull the car over. The operator fled the car and was placed into custody a short distance away.

Farah Ibrahim, 23, of 4 Clinton Ct., was charged with receiving a stolen motor vehicle, failing to stop for police, and operating with a suspended license.

UNARMED ROBBERY

On June 1, at 1:35 p.m., a CPD officer in Bellingham Square was flagged down by a male victim who told the officer he had been robbed. He stated a male came up from behind him and grabbed his headphones and threatened to kill him if he did not give up his phone. The victim described the suspect, who was observed by another CPD officer, and taken into custody.

Edwin Ibanez, 29, of 589 Broadway, was charged with unarmed robbery, intimidating a witness and malicious destruction of property under $250.

Valedictorian, Salutatorian started and finished in Chelsea schools

By Seth Daniel

The two top students at Chelsea High School (CHS) this year have distinguished academic careers, and will be headed to top-flight colleges next fall, but they also both have attended Chelsea Public Schools since pre-kindergarten.

Valedictorian Fazila Nasimi and Salutatorian Stefanie Rodrigues both began their studies at the Early Learning Center (ELC) in Chelsea, and – with the exception of a year in Everett for Rodrigues – both climbed their academic ladders in Chelsea.

Nasimi – who said she never really thought about being the valedictorian – began at the ELC, then went to the Sokolowski School, the Browne Middle School and then CHS.

It was at the Sokolowski in the second grade that Nasimi said the academic spark was lit by Ms. Salvatore.

“I would say in elementary school one of my second grade teachers, Ms. Salvatore, was the first to encourage me to be on this path to succeed,” she said. “Ever since then with the encouragement of my teachers I always wanted to do very well in school. I think she was such a positive person about learning that she made learning fun for me and it made me want to succeed in class.”

Nasimi said she isn't really interested in literature or arts, but rather will go on the biology and science paths at Tufts University next year. She said she is also thinking about studying a language.

She was helped go in that direction by summer programs at Harvard Medical School and Harvard labs. She said she also took seven Advanced Placement courses while at CHS.

She said her most difficult year, however, was her junior year.

“In my junior year of high school when I took four AP classes, I don't know how I coped with that,” she said. “It was a lot of work.”

Nasimi is the president of the InterACT Club and participates in National Honor Society, the Book Club, the Culinary Club and Yearbook.

“I think I just want to be in a place where I'm proud of myself and am happy where I am,” she said. “Wherever that is, I'll just have to see.”

For Rodrigues, she has achieved the Posse Scholarship, and will attend Denison

University in Ohio on a full scholarship with the Posse supports.

Rodrigues started at the ELC, went to the Hooks Elementary, the Clark Avenue Middle and CHS. She spent her freshman year at Everett High before coming quickly back to CHS.

She has been very involved in many activities, including cross country and track – where she still holds the school record for the 800m run. She has also been involved in the InterACT club, and said Teacher Ilana Asher has had the greatest influence on her.

Rodrigues said she hopes to become a doctor someday.

“When I was little and I would go to the doctor to get my physical, I would ask so many questions,” she said. “I like what they do. I decided I wanted to do that too. I don't really enjoy history, but math and science is what I have always been most attracted to.”

Rodrigues said it was her mom, Rosa Lemus, and her dad, Marcos Rodriguez, who most encouraged her through the years to do well – not to mention her brothers, John, Mike and Jason.

“My mom was really the one who was always on me to do my work and to do it well,” she said. “My dad was the one that always motivated me. My brothers basically said if I didn't go to a good college, they were going to beat me up.”

She also said her friends Adam, Celly and Kaylee were instrumental in keeping her on track.

In a very unique move, Rodrigues was the founder of the Buddy Program – a program she founded in her sophomore year to pair up Hooks Elementary students with high school students in a mentoring relationship.

She said the students from CHS end up being like an older sibling, and she is excited that the program will continue after she leaves.

“I believe I have successfully passed the torch to some new student leaders,” she said.

She also said she would be proud to tell everyone in far-flung Granville, Ohio that she's from Chelsea.

“When they ask, I'm going to tell everyone I'm from Chelsea, Massachusetts,” she said. “That's where I'm from.”

Temple Emmanuel, a Renaissance in Chelsea

Chelsea was a thriving center of Jewish life during the last century. Located just four miles northeast of downtown Boston, Chelsea had the densest concentration of Jews outside of New York City. The Jewish immigrants to Chelsea established about two dozen orthodox synagogues and one conservative temple. Temple Emmanuel was formed in the 1930s and continues with a dedicated congregation from the local area and across the US.

As a commitment to Temple Emmanuel and Chelsea, the members raised almost $100,000 and just completed an extensive renovation. The sanctuary was built in the 1840s as a Methodist-Episcopal church with high ceilings and excellent sight lines to the ark. In the 1950s the sanctuary, which seated almost 500, was often full for the high holidays. We still attract crowds to our major functions. A few years ago we mounted a Jews of Chelsea Exhibition that attracted more than 500 visitors.

The re-invigoration of Temple Emmanuel reflects a loyal membership and a dynamic tireless president, Sara Lee Saievetz Callahan. Sara Lee learned effective leadership from her mother and grandmother, who were very active in the community including the Chelsea Soldiers Home and the Assumption Church. Rabbi Oksana Chapman has been very creative in preserving some religious aspects of conservative traditions while adapting to embrace a diverse community. For example, services now include a chorus and musicians; interfaith and same-sex weddings and congregants are celebrated. The temple renovations include a large social hall and an updated kitchen, which can accommodate up to 135 for both religious and secular functions.

Chelsea is in the midst of a renaissance and is growing with the construction of government, commercial, and residential buildings plus a new transportation hub. Temple Emmanuel welcomes new residents, those with roots in Chelsea, and anyone seeking a welcoming and warm environment (haimish in Yiddish). We invite visitors and prospective members at any service or function.

Temple Emmanuel is throwing a party and invites you to celebrate our recent renovations and continued commitment to the renaissance of Chelsea.

Gov. Baker signs DiDomenico's Housing Bond Bill

The Housing Bond Bill passed by Sen. Sal DiDomenico and his colleagues in the Legislature was recently signed into law by Gov. Charlie Baker. The bill includes two of Senator DiDomenico's major legislative priorities: expansion of the Community Investment Tax Credit (CITC) and reauthorization of the Early Education and Out of School Time (EEOST) Capital Fund.

The CITC was created in 2012 by legislation sponsored by Senator DiDomenico. It offers a 50 percent credit to anyone who donates money to a community development corporation (CDC). CDCs are nonprofit, community based organizations focused on revitalizing the areas in which they are located by promoting and developing affordable housing, providing job training, and supporting local businesses, among other initiatives. The Sen. filed a bill to extend and expand the CITC through 2025, which was included in the bond bill.

The EEOST Capital Fund provides loans and grants for the construction and renovation of early learning centers and out-of-school-time facilities serving low-income children in the Commonwealth. Sen. DiDomenico was the original sponsor of legislation that created the Capital Fund in 2013. Under the bond bill, the EEOST Capital Fund has been reauthorized to 2023 at $45 million.

"I am thrilled that the EEOST Capital Fund and CITC expansion reauthorization were included in the Housing Bond Bill," said Sen. DiDomenico, Assistant Majority Leader of the Massachusetts Senate. "I have long supported these measures because they give communities the tools they need to make change locally to support community and economic development. I am confident that these provisions will help us support individuals and families across our Commonwealth and allow us to continue to make key housing investments and community development for years to come."

The CITC expansion and EEOST Capital Fund are two key aspects of the Housing Bond Bill, which aims to increase affordable housing production, maintain affordability in existing housing, modernize and diversify public housing, and invest in innovative solutions for the Commonwealth's growing demand for housing.

CHELSEA ART WALK

During the June 9 Chelsea Art Walk, neighbors collected oregano and scallions at the Chelsea Community Garden, while others viewed abstract art and paintings at the Pearl Street Gallery. "Playing in the Garden," at the Chelsea Community Garden, featured an annual scarecrow exhibit, drum circle, and sidewalk chalk for little ones to draw hop scotch and tulips on the pavement. An Art Therapy Exhibition was on display at the Pearl Street Gallery, showing original pieces by young adults at Roca, whose mission is to reduce incarceration by helping youth change their lives. The fun will continue Laura Appleton and Oliver.

when on June 23, from 1-6 p.m., the Chelsea Art Walk will hold Fiesta Verano, a festival featuring local and regional Spanish musical groups at Chelsea Square Park.

NEWS FROM AROUND THE REGION

EASTERN SALT LOOKING AT ROVER STREET SITE

EVERETT – The Council got a bit salty on Tuesday, May 29, as they discussed licenses needed by Eastern Salt of Chelsea to locate a salt storage area on Rover Street in the industrial zone.

The Everett City Council, recognizing the busy budget review season ahead, opted to meet on Tuesday, May 29, to ensure City business could continue unencumbered by the budget process and in recognition of the city's annual Memorial Day celebration the day before.

Though the agenda was full on May 29, few of the articles for consideration were expected to raise much controversy, including a trio of license requests from a new business to the community, Eastern Salt Company of Chelsea.

Specifically, Eastern Salt was seeking a license to operate a garage, a license for a repair facility and a license to store flammable liquids on a parcel of recently purchased land, which is zoned as Industrial property at 201 Rover St., adjacent to the Distrigas plant.

The property had formerly been operated by Boston Sand and Gravel Corporation and Aggregate Industries as a cement operation.

Routine though the licenses may have been, the discussion about the licenses was anything but, as City Councilor Wayne Matewsky, who represents the Island End neighborhood that is welcoming Eastern Salt to Everett, had some pointed questions for the plant manager and an attorney for the company.

Matewsky asked, "How can a company that spends $15 million to buy property, not reach out to city government to discuss their plans for the site?" and further inquired, "Are you planning to close the plant in Chelsea?"

Matewsky, who indicated that he felt the City's waterfront property should be more valued, said that he would not vote in favor of any licenses until he and the Council receive a "nice presentation, a booklet," explaining how the company plans to operate the site.

He agreed with other councilors who felt a tour of the site would be in order before a vote.

However, City Clerk Sergio Cornelio reminded the councilors that the property is properly zoned as industrial land and the planned operation was within the allowed uses of industrial property.

That meant the Council's only purview on the matter was the three licenses before it.

Councilors Michael Marchese and Fred Capone disagreed with councilors Matewsky and Stephen Simionelli that the line of questioning of the Eastern representatives was appropriate.

"I am appalled at the way we're acting," scolded Marchese. "Is this the way we welcome a new business to the city of Everett? Why would anyone want to come here to do business?"

Councilor Anthony DiPiero added, "Sometimes, some things are out of our control...I am perfectly willing to vote in favor of the requested licenses before us this evening."

Following some discussion and a brief recess called by Council President Peter Napolitano, after Matewsky insinuated that Councilor Rosa DiFlorio might have a conflict of interest because she had once worked for Eastern Salt several years ago, the Council ultimately voted in favor of all three licenses.

Councilors Capone, DiFlorio, DiPiero, Hanlon, Marchese and Napolitano voted in favor of all three licenses.

Eastern Salt has agreed to arrange a tour of the site and fuller explanation of the expected operation at a later date as a courtesy to the Council.

DRIVER CHARGED WITH OPERATING IMPAIRED TWICE IN ONE DAY

EVERETT – The Everett Police reported that they charged a truck driver from Foxborough with operating under the influence of drugs not once, but twice in the same day.

The situation was dire right off the bat when police reported to the Produce Center area on the Everett side of the line for a semi-truck that wasn't moving. The driver was operating a semi-truck loaded with fuel and was passed out behind the wheel.

Officers were able to quell the dangerous situation and the driver was summoned for OUI drugs and sent to the CHA Everett for treatment.

Later in the day, he was released from the hospital and made his way back to the Produce Center where he had his personal vehicle. He got into his vehicle and soon got into a collision with another vehicle after crossing the middle line.

The same police officer responded and charged the man with OUI drugs for the second time that day.

A drug recognition expert was brought in from the Revere Police and determined he was intoxicated on a narcotic.

Kenneth Davis, 50, of Foxborough, was charged.

Police said it was a scary situation and they are encountering more and more drivers who have come to find themselves intoxicated on narcotics and passed out behind the wheel of a running vehicle.

The issue has become more common in surrounding cities as well.

MCGEE SUBMITS BUDGET TO COUNCIL

LYNN – Mayor Thomas McGee submitted his Fiscal Year 2019 budget to the Lynn City Council. McGee's proposed FY19 is $319,524,500 and in a letter to the Council, McGee said the budget includes an $847,564 increase in reserves, $300,000 increase for the snow and ice budget and fully funds the city's net school spending requirement for education.

McGee added that the proposed budget correctly budgets the City's share of health insurance costs based on projected 100 percent utilization at a cost of $47.3 million.

"Furthermore, this proposed budget includes the addition of essential financial and public safety staff, specifically, the city's first fulltime Chief Financial Officer, twenty new firefighters pending the awarding of a federal grant, and ten new police officers," said McGee. "Lastly, the balanced budget I am submitting does not require the entire use of the borrowing authorized by 'An Act relative to the financial condition of the city of Lynn.'"

The city's fire chief, Stephen Archer, testified Tuesday that his department is down 25 firefighters over the past five years so he has applied to FEMA for a Staffing for Adequate Fire and Emergency Response (SAFER) grant that will be used to hire the twenty new firefighters.

Through the federal grant, FEMA will pick up most of the costs of the new fire hires' salaries for three years. Following the three year period the cost of the salaries would revert back to the city.

Back in February the Council voted in favor of a home rule petition that will allow the city to borrow up to $14 million from the Department of Revenue to close the city's $8.1 million budget gap. The home rule petition that passed also raised some fees on residents and lifted a restriction that requires voter approval before the city can borrow more than $4 million.

The one dissenting vote came from Ward 2 City Councilor Richard Starbard who said he would not support the Home Rule Petition due to the plan to implement a $90 annual trash fee on single family owner occupied homeowners. In June of last year the Council voted to enact the trash fee to help raise $2 million in revenue. At the time of that vote a single-family owner occupied home was exempt from the fee.

Mayor Thomas McGee has argued that desperate times call for desperate measures and the borrowing of up to $14 million over the next two years, the increase in fees and removing restrictions was necessary to ensuring a viable fiscal future for Lynn and close a growing budget gap.

Councilor's Like Ward 1 City Councilor Wayne Lozzi agreed that some belt tightening needed to be done until the city gets a handle on the budget gap.

The budget will be presented again at the next Council meeting next week.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE VOTES "NO" ON SCHOOL CHOICE

WINTHROP – As in years prior, the School Committee was tasked with conducting its annual voting for or against the state school choice program.

The school choice program allows parents to send their children to schools in communities other than the city or town in which they reside and tuition is paid by the sending district to the receiving district.

The School Committee votes on the program every year and if they don't make a decision, then the district is automatically enrolled in the program.

There was no shortage of opinions surrounded the school choice program at Monday night's School Committee meeting.

"I'm speaking on behalf of several concerned citizens who don't want school choice," said resident Nick Tsiotes. "As a community we've gone forward with a new school, where class size could be a potential issue if students come in from other districts. Our students are thriving now and no community around us has school choice and reciprocates."

The motion to not have school choice, was met with a majority, leaving School Committee Chairman Valentino Capobianco as the one member opting to bring the program to the district.

PROM SELFIE

Capobianco was a school choice student in 2003 while his family resided in East Boston. The option to attend the Winthrop school district opened up doors for Capobianco's family, ultimately leading them to buy a house in Winthrop the spring after his freshman year.

OFFICIALS QUIET ON LEGAL CASES

WINTHROP – Town officials are quiet about the two legal issues facing the town, and the town's attorney doesn't seem to want to talk about any of them, and even though all three cases stem from the police department, there is little public talk about the cases.

Last week the council met in executive session to discuss the cases with Town Manager David Cressman.

The first case is Racow vs. the Town of Winthrop, in which a jury awarded $2.3 million to Police Officer Judy Racow for gender discrimination and retaliation. So far it appears a payment has not been made and the award amount is accruing interest, according to attorney Beth Meyers, who represents Racow.

The second case involves former Winthrop police officer Ferruccio Romeo, who is also a member of the Massachusetts Bar. Romeo was terminated from the Winthrop Police Department for submitting a request to be paid for a special detail that he allegedly did not perform. The case went to arbitration where the arbitrator ruled that the town lacked just cause to terminate him and ordered his reinstatement with back pay.

The town file a complaint in Superior Court to vacate the arbitrator's decision and on May 21, 2018 the Court concluded that the judgement vacating the arbitrator's award is vacated and a new judgement

The town is being represented by attorney Howard Greenspan of Lynnfield in these legal cases. He did not attend Tuesday night's Executive Session Council meeting.

POLICE IDENTIFY VICTIM OF SHORE PLAZA SHOOTING

The man who was shot and killed at Shore Plaza housing development on Border Street Friday has been identified as 29-year-old Taquise Johnson.

Just before midnight Friday officers from District A-7 responded to a 911 call for shots fired in the area of 800 Border Street (Shore Plaza). Police located an adult male victim, who has since been identified as Johnson, of Boston, suffering from multiple gunshot wounds.

The victim was pronounced dead at the scene.

The Boston Police Department is actively investigating the facts and circumstances surrounding this incident. Anyone with information is strongly urged to contact Boston Police Homicide Detectives at (617) 343-4470.

Community members wishing to assist this investigation anonymously can do so by calling the CrimeStoppers Tip Line at 1 (800) 494-TIPS or by texting the word 'TIP' to CRIME (27463). The Boston Police Department will stringently guard and protect the identities of all those who wish to help this investigation in an anonymous manner.

In 2007 the Boston Police Fugitive and Apprehension Unit, Homicide Unit, United States Marshals, and State Police apprehended a Taquise Johnson, who was 18 at the time, and another man in connection with the May 15, 2007 shooting death of Cordeiro Andrade and the injury of a female in Mattapan. Johnson and Jovan Adams were tried separately for the murder with Adams receiving a life sentence.

FRIENDS HOLD SPECIAL LUNCHEON FOR JOHN NUCCI

Throughout his career, whether in politics or at Suffolk University, John Nucci has always surrounded himself with close friends and confidants that advised him, mentored him and, most of all, lifted his spirits when he was down.

Last Friday at Rino's Place in Eastie close friends like former Senate President Robert Travaglini, Al Caldarelli, Joe Faretra, Mike Grieco, Sal LaMattina and Paul Scapicchio, among others, gathered for food, drinks and laughs. The point of the luncheon, explained Travaglini, was that Nucci has been a loyal friend to so many for so many years it was time to give back and lift his spirits.

In his thirties, after the passing of his father following complications of Polycystic Kidney Disease, Nucci found out that he had inherited the same genetic disorder where the renal tubules become structurally abnormal, resulting in the development and growth of multiple cysts within the kidney.

For the past several months, with his kidneys failing, Nucci has been in the process of finding a living kidney donor in order to potentially avoid dialysis treatments and the further deterioration of his failing kidneys.

No stranger to rallying the troops in Eastie and city-wide, the former Boston City Councilor, his wife, Peggy, and their three sons, John, Michael and David have launched a campaign in local Boston news-papers, on social media and through the relationships Nucci has cultivated over the years to find a living donor match.

"It's been amazing," said Nucci. "The outpouring of support is overwhelming. I would say I probably only know personally about a third of the people that have signed up to be tested. The rest are people that have seen my story in the papers or heard about it online."

At Friday's lunch it was less about talking about Polycystic Kidney Disease and more about good-natured ribbing, jokes and the chance to relax with friends.

"Everyone here and all that you have done for me over the past few months means the world to me," Nucci told the table of friends in a toast. "I couldn't have gone through this without your love and support."

COUNCILLORS SEEK TO END RAT PROBLEM

REVERE – You can make all the jokes you want to about rats, but the truth is that the city's neighborhoods have a terrible infestation of them all over and something needs to be done.

Monday night Ward 4 Councillor Patrick Keefe and Councillor George Rotondo both put in motions for the city to take some action.

"This is a public health issue," Rotondo said.

Keefe wants the Board of Health and Inspectional Services to address the city council with a plan. Rotondo wants city officials to purchase 2,000 bait boxes, or place box owls in problem areas and utilize sterilization techniques used on rats in New York City.

Keefe said over the past two years there has been several motions submitted relating to the rat problem, but no noticeable action has been taken.

"Do we have a funding issue or an enforcement issue," Keefe asked.

Councillor Steven Morabito said right now the Health Department will bait an area once, the second time the homeowner pays.

"I think we need to work more quickly this year and be more aggressive," he said.

Several residents of the Cooledge Street public housing complained to the council about the hundreds of rat holes on the property. One rat was so big it was mistaken for a cat by a resident. Councillors Rizzo, Novoselsky and Giannino shared rat encounter stories, including at the Susan B. Anthony School.

"This has become a real serious issue in the city," said Ward 5 Councillor John Powers. "It's not something new, it's become more serious."

Powers said the city used to have one person to handle the rodent complaints and he wondered if the city might have to go back to that.

"We have to address this like you would a crime spree," Powers said.

There are several reasons why Revere is ripe for rats. First, the ground below is marsh. Second, road construction and new building construction stir up the rat colonies. Third, people are not doing enough to keep their trash secure.

"I hate to throw anybody under the bus but the Revere Housing Authority, I have in my neighborhood the Garfield Elliot projects and the barrels down there are always overflowing," Novoselsky said.

Ward 6 Councillor Charlie Patch said he has made motions in the past regarding rats.

"The rat population has increased drastically," he said. "And it's only going to get worse."

"I'll take it one step further and say this is a public health crisis," Rizzo said. "This is now exploding across the city. Right now you need 10,000 bait boxes. That's how bad it is."
